

The Living with White-tailed Deer Program emphasizes the importance of research and fact finding to compile a position statement for each interest group. Many students have little experience with researching deer-related issues and therefore may not have the knowledge of what sources contain reliable data. The following websites are arranged by topic and may aid students in making informed decisions.

I encourage teachers to visit some or all of the sites listed to become acquainted with the vast array of information surrounding deer management. Becoming familiar with the existing literature will allow you to direct students to appropriate material for their research. There are several websites dedicated exclusively to urban deer management and contain a comprehensive amount of information from deer resistant landscaping to detailed lyme disease data. I feel that The Deer Alliance (www.deeralliance.com), a proactive organization in Connecticut maintains one of the most broad and reliable sites. In addition, most states Department of Natural Resources websites have information on deer along with that states deer management plan.

Please inform students that facts from blogs, Wikipedia, and non-professional sources do not always contain the most accurate information. Students should always cite sources when reporting their stance on an issue. Most importantly, encourage students to have fun while fact-finding!
